FOUR MEN SERVE STUDENT ACTION CENTER

MISSOULA--

Four men are currently serving as the directors and coordinators of the Student Action Center (SAC) at the University of Montana.

SAC serves to represent student views on social, environmental and political issues. The center sponsored a conference on the environment last October and is a current sponsor of the All-Montana Catalog, a directory of small Montana businesses, currently in the process of publication. SAC also publishes "The Paper Sac," a monthly newsletter addressing issues of concern to the wilderness and environmental, feminist and anti-nuclear movements.

In addition, the center assists various groups in acquiring table space in the University Center for fund-raising or informational purposes and is currently involved in setting up a draft-counseling center.

Ron Stief, a senior in philosophy from Big Timber, is serving as director; Terry Messman, a senior in journalism from Great Falls, is editor of "The Paper Sac"; Barry E. Adams, a sociology major from Thompson Falls, serves as environmental projects coordinator, and Jim Weinberg, a philosophy major from Missoula, serves as draft counseling coordinator.

Messman, the son of Ida Messman, holds scholarships from the Great Falls Tribune and the David Rorvik Interpretive Journalism Fund.

Stief's parents are Bob and Joanne Stief.
